

Attention is the process by which the brain focuses on certain stimuli while ignoring others.
In psychology, selective attention helps humans filter important information from distractions.